

Family Time – Trip to SUNY Oswego.

June 2008

My daughter wanted to transfer from University of New Hampshire to a NY State School... There is something about a New Yorker hanging with kids from a Rural Boston / New England suburb that made her want to come back to her home state of New York.

I was to meet her at the Syracuse Airport – It was the first time she had traveled by air alone, so I wanted to give myself plenty of time to get there. I do have a Garmin GPS in my car and also made a printout from Mapquest to get me started. Somehow, after I crossed the GW Bridge, Headed to New Jersey, some roads were closed and I ended up on the Outerbridge Crossing to Staten Island. The three hours extra time I allowed myself was now spent... Once on the proper road, my daughter called me, mentioned her flight had connected in DC and she was delayed 40 minutes. I was thinking.. “Great News”... so I didn’t have to rush quite so much. I arrived in time as the plane landed a few minutes after I got there.

I see my daughter as a very capable young lady, responsible, smart, and mature. She had some tough decisions to make with transferring schools, and did plenty of research, on academic, economic and social levels. We went on the tour of the campus, and saw the dorms, classes and what the school had to offer. The classes that she wanted both for her major and minor electives were available and everything fell into place nicely. She registered for school and will begin classes there in the fall.

Now she is back in New Hampshire for finals week. This coming week is the road trip to pick her and her belongings up, and say goodbye to that school.

My daughters both work full time in the summer, as do I – So that’s it from me for this month – Hope everyone has a happy, healthy, safe and productive summer.
